Secure Access to OWA Attachments

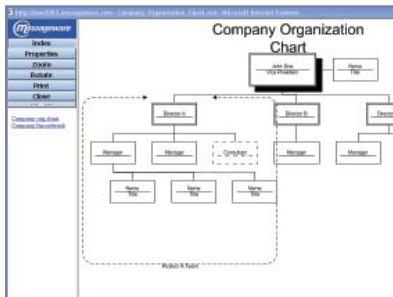

Outlook Web Access Attachment Security

When you use Outlook Web Access to send and view attachments, the files are left in the Temporary Internet Files folder of the browser on the local computer, where they can be accessed by anyone. So if you are logging in from a conference kiosk, client's office or computer used by multiple users, you are exposing documents to unauthorized users.

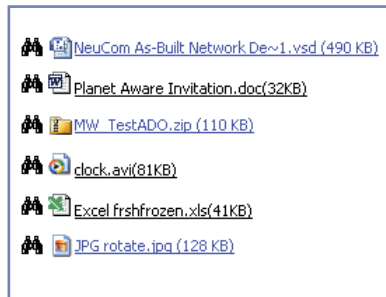

AttachView offers secure web access to OWA attachments by converting attachment files into secure web pages, giving you fast, secure access to the documents you need to make business decisions.

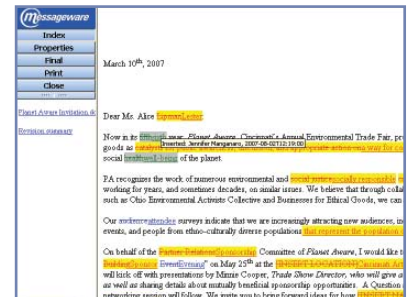

Security Features

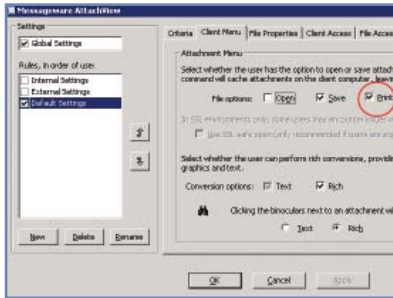

View attachments as secure HTML pages which cannot be left behind on the local computer

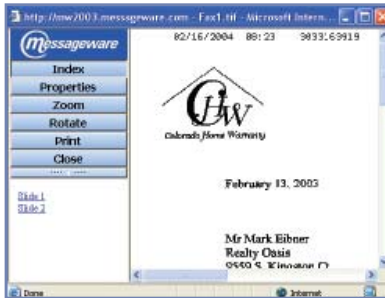

View all widely used file types without the native application

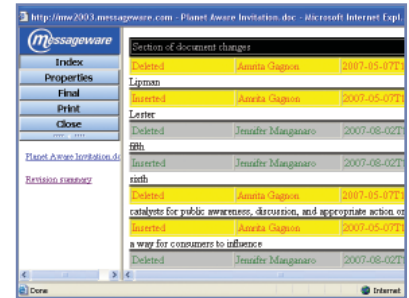

View Microsoft Word Track Changes to recognize draft documents before distributing

Control a user's ability to open/view/print attachments based on location, user and device

Zoom/Rotate faxes and images, use Hyperlinked table of contents to navigate easily through documents

View revisions in Microsoft Word attachments by author, date and time
